MARKER ORDERED BY DAR FOR ELD. DANIEL WILLIAMS

DAR Chapter Will Dedicate Marker At His Grave At Caney

A D.A.R. marker for the grave of Elder Daniel Williams, Revolutionary War soldier who is buried at Caney, has been approved by the Daughters of the American Revolution national monument commission, Mrs. Ova Amyx, regent of the Morgan County chapter DAR, reported at the chapter's meeting here Monday evening at the home of Mrs. C. K. Stacy.

The local chapter DAR will dedicate the marker at Elder Williams' grave in the cemetery at Caney late this summer. It will be the third DAR marker erected at graves of Revolutionary War soldiers of Morgan county. Last year the DAR erected a monument at the grave of Thos. Lewis at Pomp and two years ago erected a monument at the grave of Joseph Carter at Grassy Creek.

Elder Daniel Williams came to Kentucky from North Carolina in the 1770's and helped Boone build Boonesboro. Later he fought in the Battle of Blue Licks, considered the last battle of the Revolution. In the 1780's he removed to Montgomery county and served as pastor of the Lulbegrud Baptist church He removed to the present site of West Liberty about 1803 and built the first permanent home on the site. A Baptist preacher, he preached throughout this section and helped organize a number of Baptist churches. In 1813 he helped organize the Burning Springs Baptist Association and served as its first moderator. He died in 1820.

Through the efforts of Dr. Charles B. Stacy of Pineville and others, Elder Daniel Williams' squirrel rifle, powder horn and bullet pouch have been secured and brought back to Morgan county. They will be displayed in a glass case at the dedication of the marker, along with other mementos of Elder Williams, probably some original minutes of the Burning Springs Primitive Baptist Association. These will be displayed in the glass case and then placed on display in West Liberty for permanent preservation.

Rev. Claude McClure of Indiana, a great great grandson of the Patriarch, will act as master of ceremonies at the dedication of the DAR marker. Date of the dedication will be announced as soon as Rev. McClure reports the dates he will be available, Mrs. Amyx said.

Two new members of the DAR were welcomed by the local chapter at Monday's meeting—Mrs. John Rose and Mrs. Harold Rose of Ezel. Mrs. James Redwine of Sandy Hook was a guest. She is to become a member of the local chapter soon.

Mrs. Amyx gave an interesting report of her attendance at the National Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Washington in April.

West Liberty Swimming Pool To Be Opened On Memorial Day

Dedication To War Vets and Opening Set at 12 Slow Time

West Liberty will formally dedicate its swimming pool in opening day exercises Memorial Day, Monday, May 30, Dr. Alec Spencer, chairman of the swimming pool committee, announced this week.

At a meeting of the pool committee last week, plans for the program and for the pool opening were completed, and Glendon Stanley was named manager at the pool. Stanley, athletic director at Morgan County High, managed the operation of the pool last year. Mrs. Glendon Stanley, concessions and ticket manager last summer, was again named to that position.

Although the pool opened last summer and operated for two months, its dedication was postponed until opening day this year when more concrete work and landscaping had been done.

A bronze plaque was received this week and will be unveiled at the Memorial Day ceremony. The pool will be dedicated to Morgan county war veterans, and the complete inscription on the plaque, which will be mounted on the bathhouse, reads: "Dedicated to all those from Morgan county who have served in the armed services of the United States—Erected for the benefit of our children."

The program will get underway at 12 o'clock slow time, and will be brief. It is hoped that families from West Liberty and throughout the county will not only attend the dedication rites, but will bring a basket lunch and enjoy a picnic together on the spacious grounds surrounding the pool.

BIGGER, BETTER FAIR PLANNED

For years one of the highlights of Morgan county activities, your fair promises to be bigger and better than ever this year. The fair board president, Austin Hill and members of the board, have spent several long sessions planning for an improved fair. It is going to require a lot of work and effort by everyone to make it a success—a fair for the young and old, schools and farmers.

Farming is Morgan county's number one activity. We will live and progress only as our farming progresses. Every individual business or enterprise in our county depends on our farmers producing more and better crops and livestock. As the farmer prospers, then only can the merchants and businessmen prosper. This year you are going to be asked to contribute more freely to your fair. In so doing you will not only help the 4-H groups, the future farmers, the home economics girls and all the youth organizations, but the present farmers and yourselves as well.

The Fair Board has voted this year to have a fair catalogue which will be sent to all contributors, and also to have bigger and more prizes. Also, in the near future plans are being made to own our own fair grounds, one which will have enough room for plenty of parking and livestock exhibitions.

So get behind your fair. Make it the fair the Blue Grass County of the Mountains should have.

W. LIBERTY LEADS LEAGUE WITH 3RD WIN IN BATH CO.

To Play Mt. Sterling Here Sunday In 4th Bluegrass Loop Meet

West Liberty's Whiz-Kids took over undisputed possession of first place in the Eastern Division of the Blue Grass League Sunday as they wallopped a "loaded" Owingsville nine by an 8-2 count, thus registering their third consecutive loop triumph without a setback. The loss dropped the Owingsville lads into the second slot with a 2 won, 1 loss slate.

Once again it was the mound work of "Big Steve" that turned the trick. The lanky southpaw held the "strong Owingsville attack" down to a meager 2 hits while striking out 12.

Although hindered by an early inning wildness, the big fellow settled down after giving up his second hit in the fifth inning to retire the host team through the final four frames without a safety. Only three men found their way to first base through the final four stanzas, two by walks and one after being hit by a pitch.

The Owingsville team acquired an early first inning lead in the contest as they scored their only two runs in the initial frame. Two walks a single and West Liberty's only error, a two base bobble by left-fielder Walter Brown, spelled the tallys.

The local team took command of the contest in the top half of the third, however, as they combined two doubles and a fielder's choice with the third of five Owingsville misques to push across three runs and grab a 3-2 advantage. The Whiz Kids made it 4-2 in the fifth as a single, an error and a fielder's choice plated another West Liberty runner.

The count remained stationary until the top of the ninth when once again the West Liberty bats began ringing. During the final frame the local picked up some heavy insurance as they jumped on Jim Kiser for five hits, enough to score four more runs and bring the final count to 8-2. Included in the ninth inning barrage was a towering home run blast to left field by Bob "Bear" Blair.

Three West Liberty sluggers, Merle Nickell, Richie Stacy and Bob Blair, each collected three hits in the 13 hit attack on Owingsville. Fred Blair kept up his hot batting pace registering two safeties in five plate appearances.

The West Liberty club will entertain Mt. Sterling here Sunday with game time to be at 2:30 fast time. "Big Steve" will be in action for the local nine, while the Mt. Sterling moundsman is yet to be announced. Tickets to the fray may be obtained from any player or club official.

Milk Adds Millions To Farms' Incomes

Old Bossy produced 92 million dollars worth of milk in Kentucky the past year. So says a statement from the University of Kentucky, issued in connection with June as Dairy Month. There were 628,000 cows in the state in 1954.

Dairy cow numbers in Kentucky have made a steady and consistent growth in the past three decades. In 1954 milk cow numbers were 24 percent higher and milk production 41 percent larger than the average for the years from 1924 to 1930.

Kentucky farmers have taken advantage of new and growing markets for whole milk and have shifted away from sour cream and butterfat. In 1925 there were no cheese plants and no evaporated milk and ice cream manufacturers. Since 1930 there has been a decline in the number of creameries and cream buying stations and an increase in the whole milk outlets.

The decline in the demand for butter and the enlargement of whole milk routes and new plants have resulted in a nine-fold increase in milk sales paralleled by a sharp decline in butterfat sales. In 1954 whole milk brought in more than 10 times as much cash as did butterfat. It is estimated that about 500 million pounds of whole milk were bottled for sale in Kentucky in 1953.

Dairying is considered well adapted to small farms so numerous in Kentucky. Farmers in this state have some advantages in costs of production because of plentiful labor, good pastures and opportunities for winter grazing.

YOCUM—

HELP AT CEMETERY WORKING LAST WK.

YOCUM, Ky., May 23—(By Cassie Lewis)—Memorial Day is almost here again and what about our cemeteries? Will friends and relatives coming from a distance find them nice and clean? Your writer can answer for one—the Pleasant Run cemetery that was fenced two years ago and later limed and sowed in grass, has been cleaned. The following relatives and friends met at the cemetery a few days ago and cut all the weds, raked them and removed the old wreaths, etc. Paris Lewis brought his two-man power saw and Jim F. Engle helped him to cut all the stumps and some ugly timber that had been left from the early clearing. Others who helped were Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lewis of West Liberty, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lewis, Mrs. Ella Howard, Mrs. Jim F. Engle and Mrs. Paris Lewis. Two nice monuments. were erected in the cemetery May 20, one to the grave of James A. Hurley, the other to the grave of Lloyd Engle.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lewis spent Sunday with relatives at Blaze.

Mrs. Lexie Engle who has been going to the doctor daily for treatment for her head and eyes is improving slowly.

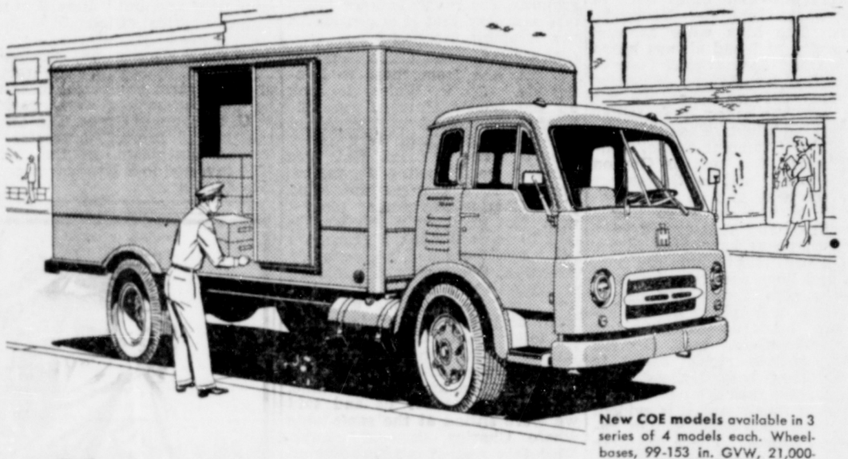

IN MEMORY OF MY DEAR ONE
Col. Milton Hager Taulbee

It has been a long time, Darling,
Since you went home to God,
But I cherish memories sweet of you—
While here on earth you trod.

I am lonely, Mutty darling,
As I brush away the tears,
Longing for those happy days
Of just a few short years.

I know God has a special place
For loved ones such as thee
And some day in eternity
Your sweet face I shall see.

FISHING - - NEWS - -

Bernard Whitt, Fishing Editor

A fishing party composed of Josephine McGuire, Dixie Carter, Liza Wells, Zettie Pieratt, Eva Nevius, and Mary Davis took to the river bank back of town one day last week and had their dinners along. Equipment was borrowed of Tom Wells. Dixie Carter was the only one to catch a fish. A small one. Miss Florence McGuire did not go. Lula Arnett did not go. Gossip develops that others, whose names we do not mention, were expected to join in the party but did not show. Rain drove them in and they had to eat dinner at Josephine's. Some people think they were fishing for bigger fish.

John Cassity, 80, of Leisure, in town Friday, said he has caught 87 mice in traps the last two months. It is thought these good fish bait.

Mr. and Mrs. James Weddington at Mussel Shoals went fishing. His wife Lenore caught a big catfish and started to yell for help and fell into the river. Mr Weddington rescued the fish and also Mrs. Weddington.

Rev. Joe Nevius has a farm on Grassy Creek and the farm has a pond and the pond has some fish. One day last week Avonell Nickell went fishing in the pond. She caught a 2 and a half pound bass. The word got around. All five families on the branch now fish.

Francis Hunt, Mt. Sterling, the mail man, said that Dick Adkins and wife caught 24 fish and 23 of was caught by Mrs. Adkins.

John Cassity, 81, of Leisure Store weighed the fish that Paul Whitt caught in North Fork. He weighed 4½ pounds.

N. E. Simmons of Huntington was a guest of Carl Sinclair at Kiwanis Wednesday and said he saw a catfish tied to a car in Pikeville about the size of a deer and this might be the Gordon Ford fish.

Control of Bermuda Grass By Chemicals Possible, Is Report

Bermuda grass is a long-lived perennial with a spreading habit of growth. It propagates by creeping stems, which root at each node that touches the ground, and by underground rootstocks which send up new shoots from the nodes. No viable seed is produced in Kentucky. The creeping stems branch freely and soon form a dense ground covering mat. These stems may reach a length of 3 or 4 feet in a season. At the same time, Bermuda grass spreads by sending out thick white rootstocks which form a dense underground mat. These rootstocks live from year to year and serve the plant as food storage organs. New shoots may arise from each node or joint of the underground rootstock.

In the South, Bermuda grass is considered an excellent permanent pasture plant, but its growth habits make it a week in cultivated fields. Once established it is very difficult to eradicate. Soil sterilizing chemicals may be used to get rid of it in small areas or patches, but owing to the expense of chemical treatments cultural practices are considered practical for controlling the grass on large areas or in solidly infested fields.

Use of chemicals—either of several chemicals may be used to kill Bermuda grass, but TCA (sodium trichloroactetate) is one that is satisfactory for most conditions. Apply 4 ounces of TCA salt in water as a pray or drench to 100 square feet of area (110 pounds per acre). The TCA should be dissolved in the amount of water needed for good coverage and applied with a pressure sprayer or through a sprinkling can. The area treated should extend 2 or 3 feet beyond the surface growth. The chemical is more effective applied on the soil than applied on the top growth. Where possible, plow, disk, or chop up the infested area before treating the soil. Such cultivation weakens the plant so that its rootstocks are more readily killed by the TCA. Treatments can be made at any time of year, but usually they are more effective at a season when moderate rains are likely to ocur shortly after treatment because water is required to move the chemical down to the root zone. In some conditions heavy rains may move the TCA too deep for most effective action. TCA used at the rate suggested kills all vegetation and sterilizes the soil for 90 days or longer so that no crops can be grown on the treated area. Trees, shrubs, and other plants growing close by maybe injured or killed if their roots extend in areas treated with TCA. Precautions that are printed on the containers in which TCA is purchased should be read and carefully followed.

RETREATMENT Usually some rootstocks or stems will survive chemical treatment and start new growth. In a control program, this growth should be killed by spot treatment whenever it starts.

CULTURAL CONTROL—For fields solidly infested with Bermuda grass plowing about July 1, followed by clean cultivation at 2 week intervals throughout the summer for one or more years is the most practical method of eradication. Close pasturing of the grass for one or more seasons before the land is plowed weakens the plants so that they are more easily killed by the summer cultivations. Frequent cultivation with disk harrow, spring tooth or field cultivator during the summer will prevent growth and gradually weaken and starve the rootstocks. Following the final cultivation near mid-September, sow winter barley or rye to be either winter-grazed or combine-harvested. After the small grain crop, the land should be plowed again. If some live Bermuda grass rootstocks remain in the soil at plowing time the land should either be clean-cultivated, as during the preceding summer, or solid-planted to a smother crop such as soybeans (inoculated) or sudan grass. At the time of plowing after small grain, if it seems likely that few or no live rootstocks remain in the soil, the land may be planted to a clean-cultivated crop such as corn. Then if Bermuda grass plants show up during the summer they may be destroyed by spot spraying with TCA as already described.

Bermuda grass in solidly infested fields may be greatly reduced by close summer grazing, followed by shallow fall plowing, leaving the rootstocks exposed to winter freezing. Use of early-planted soybeans as a smother crop the next summer will further reduce the infestation, if not eradicate it.

A Visit To Scotland

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lowell Allen, West Liberty, who have been living in Bedford, England, for the past several months, returned last week from a tour of Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The Courier is publishing an account of their trip. Mrs. Allen is the former Miss Anna Jean Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Price, and was a member of the Morgan County high faculty—

We got back from our trip yesterday. We had a good time and saw more—also went farther—than we expected.

We left Bedford Friday, May 6, by train and arrived in Leeds at 2:30 p.m. and toured the city until time to get the train to Ilkley. We arrived at Sheila and Gordon Grahams' home at Ilkley and they are just as nice as Lena Wells (Mrs. Gus Voiers, Vanceburg, Ky.) wrote. We both like them very much and they were happy that we finally got to visit them after inviting us several times. They entertained us leisurely and graciously and Sheila had prepared all kinds of true English dishes, such as meat pie, and I couldn't begin to tell you how many different kinds of cookies and cakes. We ate soon after we arrived, then we, along with their dog, Tawny, went for a walk (four-mile hike) back of their home into the Yorkshire moors. The hills were as vast and pretty as I had always heard and we had such a good view of the valley and Ilkley. We were all ready for tea when we got back, and the cakes—then talked till past midnight. The next day was Ilkley Grammar School's annual Sports Day, and as Gordon is woodwork and math teacher there, he was one of the timekeepers at the event, so Sheila sat with us and kept us informed on all that was happening. There were many track events for both girls and boys and very interesting—the nice, sunny day helped too. This took place in the afternoon, so that morning we went downtown, met Sheila's father, and we took them to lunch. They bought their home at a bargain price when it was in need of repair, and it is evident what each has done in the remodeling process. There are three floors and a basement.

On to Edinburgh, Scotland, which was the prettiest city we visited. We arrived at 8:30 (still daylight) Sunday evening and stayed at The Odelphi Hotel three nights. It was a small hotel but so clean and comfortable and we liked everything about it, just as we did Edinburgh. Next morning we went shopping on Princess street. As I wrote previously, they certainly do attract the tourists. We bought some colorful plaids.

In the afternoon we took a bus tour of the city, seeing Edinburgh Castle inside and out. St. Giles Cathedral was a main point of the tour. This is where John Knox preached, and all the windows are artistically painted—one was strikingly done in scarlet. We also visited the palace, Royal residence in Scotland; the Royal Scottish Academy, Sir Walter Scott's monument, a Loch, and the University of Edinburgh. We took a lot of movies and stills and the guide was constantly looking to see if we were keeping up with the party. There were more Americans in the group than any other nationality—some were from Africa and Italy, and of course, Great Britain.

That night we found out that Johnnie Ray was in Edinburgh for a week, and got tickets through out hotel hostess. The people here really like him, and he was just as good as when we saw him in Miami (Florida) and in London. We spent the next day on our own—Edinburgh is nice even if doing nothing. We noticed in Scotland and Ireland that everything seemed slightly more modern than in England, but of course they haven't had the job of rebuilding that England has. I had a time getting cokes with ice, but by the time we left Edinburgh, the waitress was bringing me a glass of coke with THREE ice cubes.

We went by bus to Glasgow and stayed there one night. The city isn't too attractive, although it is large and the stores are nice. We got a steamer from here to Belfast, Northern Ireland. Sailing out, we got a good view of Glasgow's shipbuilding industry. We got on the boat at 7:30 p.m., ate and started crossing the North Channel at 9:00. We arrived in Belfast at 6:00 a.m., but stayed on in our cabin till 8:00 a.m. The boat was small but nice. We stayed at the Royal Avenue Hotel, in the center of Belfast. This is the city of linen shops and we bought a few pieces, one piece has green Shamrocks embroidered on white linen.

We went by train from Belfast to Dublin, Free Ireland, and in Dublin we were surprised to see as many American cars as English ones, also ice cream parlors and juke boxes. The American cars are bought purchase tax free, we found out. Dublin was a lovely city and everyone seemed to be rushing around, but it was Saturday—and Saturday is Saturday the world over. But Sunday couldn't be quieter anywhere than it is in Great Britain. We got a boat for the three hour trip across the Irish Sea to Holyhead, Wales. This boat, The Cambria, was larger and prettier, and the scenery along the coast was nice, this being a resort area. The crossing was rough and we found out next day that it is considered the roughest crossing.

Our next destination was to Cardiff, and from there to Pontypridd, also in Wales, to look up the family Charles was billeted with while in the Army there during World War II. I used to write to them. This was quite a good feeling to me to know that I was in the same place Charles was during the last war. Not knowing if the Walbys still lived at 5 Lock Terrace, we got a taxi there and, sure enough, Bronwen, the woman I wrote to, answered the door. I didn't know her, nor she me, but we soon were acquainted. It was wonderful talking with her, her mother, and her husband Wyn. She showed me pictures of our family that they had kept all this time. They fixed tea for us and said we were sitting at the same table where Charles ate. Of course, their talk was about Charles and things we should tell him, especially that her father died five years ago. Their house is high on a mountain and her mother has lived there 57 years. They were happy to see us and so appreciative that we came all the way to see them. They want us to come back. Their six-year-old son, Barrington John, could hardly wait until 5:00 to see his cowboy program on TV. Though the Walbys' home is real nice, extensive coal mining in Southern Wales made the cities look dirtier and the countryside not so pretty. However, in Northern Wales it was beautiful—snow capped mountains on one side of us and the coast with sandy beaches on the other.

We arrived in London next morning and then on to Bedford. We were gone eleven days and feel as if we've seen a little of the British Isles—also glad to have been in each of their capital cities—Edinburgh, Belfast, Dublin, Cardiff and London. We both said we'de never forget this trip and little things like eating oat cakes in Edinburgh and seeing men in their colorful kilts, talking with our waitress in Glasgow who was from Dayton, Ohio, noticing the different accents of English in these three places, and in Wales hearing several people speaking Welsh.

Again, our book on Great Britain which the Voiers gave us and your National Geographic map of Britain helped make our trip so enjoyable. We referred to them constantly.

You've often read or heard references to savings as a "nest egg" for your future. The treasury Department reminds us that china nest eggs don't grow into chickens, whereas money put into series E savings Bonds can grow for nearly twenty years. And you can count your chickens before they are hatched: the cash values for each six months are guaranteed in advance by Uncle Sam.

Happy's Promises Vs. His Record

In a recent speech in West Liberty Mr. "Happy-Go-Lucky" Chandler spent much time in name-calling. He was introduced, however, as a person ready to discuss the issues of the campaign. He had not talked long before it became apparent the only "issue" he is interested in is "elect me Governor."

He was elected Governor once, but then there arose the "issue" as to whether he should remain Governor or increase his pay by resigning as Governor only to be appointed U. S. Senator. To the senate he went, hardly waiting long enough to pack his suitcase. Then another "issue" faced him. Should he remain a U. S. Senator at a measley salary of $20,000 per year or should he accept the job as baseball commissioner. Was there any doubt as to which choice he would make? Did it bother him for one moment that he was breaking faith with the people of Kentucky who elected him? So, away he went to become baseball commissioner at a salary of $60,000 per year. "Happy days" soon ended for Chandler, however, when he was fired as the baseball commissioner.

Now the "issue" facing him is whether he can get back in the limelight again as Governor of Kentucky. And if elected Governor he promises he will be faithful and trustworthy to the people and serve the full four years. How flat his promise sounds in the face of his past record.

Chandler loudly proclaims he is against the Old-Age Lien Law. Is he really? Approximately five weeks after Chandler had taken office as Governor, and on February 20, 1936, he approved House Bill No. 427 which was compiled in the laws of the Commonwealth under Chapter 94, subsection 11, page 303, Kentucky Acts of 1936. This law reads in part as follows:

"The total amount paid to any recipient of old age assistance under this act shall constitute a lien upon the estate of the recipient." If he had been against it why didn't he veto the bill? Then at the next regular session of the Legislature a bill was introduced to repeal the law. It was referred to Chadler's "graveyard committee" and there died as did other bills which Chandler didn't want passed. So the law remained in force.

Now—and this is the amazing part—Chadler, as a candidate, says he is against the Old-Age Lien Law. His record speaks louder than his campaign oratory and the people can't hear him.

Berries To Average 100 Crates An Acre

Despite cold-weather damage, UK County Agent Warren Thompson predicts that 28 acres of strawberries in Hickman county will yield an average of 100 crates an acre.

He gives much credit for the good yields expected to an improved fertilization program and to the control of insects, diseases, weeds and grass. Some growers have purchased geese for grass control.

Strawberries set this spring should be money-makers next year, Thompson said since farmers set virus-free plants and used fertilizers and insecticides.

Farmers reported that the Tennesse Beauty and Pocahontas varieties set this spring were doing exceptionally well. Other varities include Blakemore and Tennessee Shipper.

Midwestern Farmer Finds Night Lighting Helps Hogs Gain Weight

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Ever hear of an accident that benefited anybody? Once in a blue moon it happens, and when it does it makes news. This occurred in the case of a mid-west farmer who accidentally left the lights burning in his hog house one evening after he had completed his round of late chores.

When he returned to turn them off, however, he forgot his annoyance. The hogs seemed to be eating and drinking in shifts, with about 25% of them making trips to the automatic feeders and waterers at one time. He watched the performance for 45 minutes and left—leaving the lights on.

Now the hog house is illuminated every night throughout the year. For later tests showed that hogs which did not have an added after-dark incentive to eat, drink and get ready for market were slower to put on gains than those in the night-lighted house. Thermostatically controlled electric hog waterers provide water at the right temperature during cold weather.

This farmer's sleeping and feeding area covers approximately 5,000 square feet. Illumination is provided only at night by three 100 watt lamps for 150 hogs. Lights are located so as to provide brighter illumination over feeding and watering areas than over sleeping quarters.

Actually a 24-hour feeding and watering schedule is sound, since a hog's stomach is smaller than in the case of other commercial animals and they must eat and drink at frequent intervals. This being the situation, it is natural that they should enjoy a longer period to participate in their favorite pastime.

Observations during the last few years show that night lighting of hogs not only brings them to marketable weight sooner, but also prevents crowding after dark in sleeping areas and prevents fighting at the customary first feeding in the morning. Also it reduces the danger of pneumonia, and enables a farmer to keep more hogs in the same space. In the summer, hogs will eat and drink more under lights in the cool of the night than during hot days. Night lighting feeding programs can be started when pigs are 2½ months old.

NIGHT LIGHTED HOGS . . . add weight, says this mid-west farmer.

FLO ELLA
(A Requested Ballad)

Last night the moon shone brightly
And the stars were shining too,
Up to her cottage window
Her jealous lover drew.

"Come love," says he, "and let us wander
Down in yon meadows gay,
And while we hear and ponder
Let us name our wedding day."

Down deep in the thickets and forests
He led his love so dear
Says she, "'Tis for you only
That I am wondering here."

"The night is dark and dreary
And I am afraid to stay
I'm growing tired and weary
I'd like to re-trace my way."

"Re-trace your way, no never,
No more this earth you'll roam.
Adieu, adieu to parents,
Or any kind friends at home."

Down on her knees before him
She pleaded for her life,
Down in her snowy white bosom
He plunged the fatal knife.

"Dear Edward, I will forgive you"
Was her last and dying breath.
"I always have been faithful."
Then she closed her eyes in death.

Next morn as the birds sing sweetly,
So mournful was their song,
That the strangers came and found her
In a cold and silent form.

She died not brokenhearted
Nor any disease she felt.
Soon in an instant she parted
From a home she loved so well.

Down in yon meadows lonely
Where the violets fade and bloom
There sleeps my love Flo Ella
In a cold and silent tomb.

Come all of you young ladies,
Who choose to go this way,
Never put your trust in young men
For they will lead you astray.
